Company History

I started working for my father, Robert Walker, Sr. in 1980. We built custom houses on spec almost exclusively. My father is the type of builder who is very hands-on. He is skilled in every facet of building a house from the foundation up, and he taught me the same skills. We did our own excavating and site preparation, built the forms and poured the cement walls, and even put in the septic systems. We not only built the houses, but we also did all the electrical, plumbing, drywall, and roofing on these houses. My father is a perfectionist and coming from that teaching model prepared me very well for my present career in building and remodeling.

In 1996, I transitioned from new construction to a stronger emphasis on remodeling. I did this because of the constant variety and challenge of the work. In remodeling you get to see the other side of building. For instance, you see the results of someone's poor choice of materials, or trying to cut some corners 10 years ago, and how that has affected the structure. You learn what materials hold up best for a specific project over time. These are things you don't learn when you only build new structures. As an added bonus, remodeling has allowed me to meet many interesting people. I enjoy getting to know new clients, and making new friends.

Present Day

Today we are busier than ever with a network of trusted professionals able to handle any size project. Whether you have a construction, electrical or plumbing project we have the expertise to handle it. Personally, my favorite aspects of construction are roofing, vinyl siding, and finish work but any given day could find me digging piers for a deck, repairing a rotten foundation, or installing a high end kitchen or bath.

Customers: Our Most Important Asset

At Walker Construction we pride ourselves in our customer service. Every job is important to us. Whether you have a door that's sticking or you want an addition built we give each customer the same careful attention. We work on building relationships and we're proud to say that many of our customers have become friends.

At Walker Construction our motto is... Quality building doesn't cost, it pays.
